Praise for Simon Blackburn from the The New Yorker: he makes one “feel as if we were sitting in a comfortable chair, after dinner, listening to our friend Blackburn tell us not so much about politics or social history as about what lies behind them: morals--that is, what we owe to others, as opposed to what we want for ourselves.”

SIMON BLACKBURN

Bestselling author of Think, Ruling Passions, Being Good, Truth: A Guide for the Perplexed, Practical Tortoise Raising (And Other Philosophical Essays) and most recently Mirror, Mirror: The Uses and Abuses of Self-Love, is coming to speak to us about philosophical ethics. All are welcome.

“MORAL KNOWLEDGE FOR SENTIMENTALISTS”

Friday, November 7th
3.15-4.45 pm
EHHP Alumni Center
86 Wentworth Street
College of Charleston

This talk is sponsored by the Department of Philosophy.